

Suspensions of Anglo-American Accord Denied

Colonel Stimson Will Repudiate Suggestion of Entente Cordiale Between United States and Great Britain Which Would Be a Threat to Other Nations.

London, Jan. 18 (AP).—Reassured as to the distance Premier MacDonald proposes to go toward abolishing battleships, Colonel Henry L. Stimson, head of the American delegation of the forthcoming naval conference, prepared today for an attempt to dispel French and Italian suspicions of an Anglo-American accord.

Tomorrow the American secretary of state will confer with Dino Grandi, Italian foreign minister, and Andre Tardieu, French premier, separately. These conferences are intended more than anything else to establish the acquaintance of Colonel Stimson with the two men on a firm foundation, permitting mutual understanding prior to opening of the five-power conference Tuesday.

Colonel Stimson probably will tell the two statesmen that the United States and Great Britain have an ideal in common, that is, limitation and reduction of the world's sea forces, not to a point where security is threatened but sufficient to reduce the heavy financial burden of modern navies, and to remove large navies as a threat of war.

He will repudiate, possibly tactfully and not in so many words, the suggestion which has been made on the continent that the United States and Great Britain have contracted an entente cordiale, the cooperative nature of which is a threat to other nations, and that there is anything transcending an ordinary friendly alliance between them.

Colonel Stimson will be much more interested in conveying this idea to Signor Grandi and Mr. Tardieu than he will be in making an initial effort toward settling differences outstanding between their two governments, differences in which some observers already see a threat to the projected five-power naval accord.

The Italian and French differences will come up in the due course of time at the conference table, where they will be threshed out, regardless. It is felt generally, of anything Colonel Stimson might do or say now, whereas general understanding of the true relationship between Great Britain and America is a necessary premise on which much of the conference negotiations are to be built.

A hurried conference late yesterday between Colonel Stimson and Mr. MacDonald at No. 10 Downing street was believed to have relieved the Americans' minds of a misunderstanding as regards the premier's attitude toward battleships.

The version of Mr. MacDonald's statement Wednesday on that score and radiated to the George Washington said he intended to propose "abolition" of battleships or capital ships, whereas he only expressed himself to newspapermen as hoping for eventual or ultimate abolition of battleships but expecting at present to propose lengthening of age limits, or extension of the building holiday, agreed upon at the Washington conference.

The erroneous interpretation of Mr. MacDonald's statement to the newspapermen greatly concerned Colonel Stimson and the other American delegates, as the American program might thus have been greatly upset.

Correspondents going aboard the George Washington at Plymouth set the American delegation straight to some extent, and what doubt remained was believed to have been dispelled in the long conversation between Colonel Stimson and Premier MacDonald later in the day.

The American secretary of state himself would say nothing about what they had talked of, merely remarking that he had a pleasant chat and had "enjoyed a nice cup of the Prime Minister's tea." He was smiling and jovial, in contrast to the rather tired worried expression he had when rushing almost precipitantly from Paddington station to Downing street.

Unless it is at the initiative of the Japanese themselves, there will be no further conferences between the American delegation and that from Tokyo, Colonel Stimson considering that the preliminary conferences held at Washington with Reijiro Wakatsuki and his colleagues as they passed through en route to London had sufficed.

A busy week-end was ahead of the Americans and other delegations, with the probability that only a few of either of the national representatives, their assistants, or the naval experts would get to play any at all. Most of the Americans had their golf clubs, but the delegates at least appeared to have every minute of their time scheduled for days to come.

The British papers, which have been considering the approaching conference with unusual apathy, seemed today to have awakened to the fact that the world's most important show will be held in London for the next few weeks. The stories of the arrival of the Americans crowded even murder stories—for which many of the British papers have an unusual predilection—into second place.

Analysis of 1928 Election For President

Professor Ogburn Finds That Prohibition Was Three Times More Decisive an Influence Than Religion in Defeating Former Governor Smith.

Chicago, Jan. 18 (AP).—Prof. William P. Ogburn, of the University of Chicago, has completed what he believes to be the first scientific and mathematical basis for analysis of the 1928 presidential election.

In the opinion of Prof. Ogburn—who is a director of President Hoover's social survey commission—prohibition was three times more decisive an influence in the defeat of former Governor Alfred E. Smith than was the religious issue.

"The issue was so dominantly decisive that it completely over-turned party lines," Prof. Ogburn said.

In the study, the vote in 173 counties picked at random in Massachusetts, New York, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin, Colorado, Montana and California was analyzed. The reason was given for using these states, that in several of them a previous vote on minor questions had favored the wet issue.

"The influence of party regularity was almost negligible during the last election, for Democratic loyalty did not suffice to keep voters in line as against their views on prohibition and religion," the study said.

It was further indicated that there was practically no correlation between the votes which went to James V. Cox and John W. Davis, previous nominees, and those cast for Smith.

Prof. Ogburn said there was no foundation to the theory that the election represented a clash between "old American stock" and the newer immigration.

"Those foreign born voters who cast ballots for Governor Smith did so not because they were foreigners but because they were wet or Catholic or for some other reason closely correlated with these," the study said.

According to the study, the election was not a contest between urban and rural influences. In the analyzing of this phase of the study, Prof. Ogburn said he removed from the urban influence all strains of the prohibition, religious and immigration issues. "Then," he added, "the vote went slightly more for Hoover than Smith."

Entertainment And Music for Big Charity Ball
According to the Knights of Columbus Charity Ball entertainment and music committee of which J. David Schenck is chairman, patrons of the ball will be amply repaid for their attendance at the event which will be held on at the armory, Friday evening, January 24.

A number of high class acts, that promise to excel the expectations of all, including the entertainment committee, have been booked for the ball. Three of the features, which will be supported by other attractions of equal merit, are as follows: Youri Yourlift in a repertoire of feature dancing, which promises to eclipse anything of the type ever shown in Kingston. The act is direct from the Roxy Theatre, New York city.

The Sensational Slow Control Dancing, featuring Ruth Lindo. This feature is of the New York Paramount Theatre bill.

"Wheels of Chance" will be presented by the Three White Flashes known as the sensational speed kings.

Music for assembly dancing will be furnished by two orchestras, Jack Ernie and his Imperial Broadcasters and Sammy Wilson's "Sweet Adelines." In procuring the orchestras mentioned, the Knights of Columbus took into consideration that high calibre dance music is one of the most important factors in the makeup of an event such as the Charity Ball. They believe that the two groups of musicians picked are the most formidable.

Leaders of the orchestras promise that the music will be peppy, the rhythm smooth and the tempos perfect. There is little else to exact from any dance orchestra.

Those who are familiar with the various popular orchestras of the day know that Sammy Wilson's "Sweet Adelines" are considered as a real novelty outfit of entertaining musicians. They promise to be at their best on Friday, January 24.

Of course, Jack Ernie and his Imperial Broadcasters need no introduction to the people of Kingston and its surrounding territory. The committee that booked the musicians feels that this group of local boys cannot be beaten when it comes to real dance music.

Will Prove 18th Amendment Is Unconstitutional

Representative La Guardia Argues That Sufficient States Have Not Ratified the Amendment—Written Wants Test Vote on Modification.

Washington, Jan. 18 (AP).—Conflicting views on the proposal emanating from the Senate side of the Capitol for a vote on prohibition were forthcoming today from House members as the House itself arranged for a full discussion of the wet and dry issue.

The view that dry members were eager at this time to vote on the question because they were fearful of losing strength in the congressional elections of next November was voiced by Representative La Guardia, Republican, New York, before taking the House floor to renew his attack on the Eighteenth Amendment.

On the other hand, Representative Cramton, Republican, Michigan, one of the dry leaders, said he would not object to a vote "but the wets would not really want a test vote as it would show up their weakness too emphatically."

A number of other dry members indicated that Borah, Republican, Idaho, had given expression to their own views with his statement of yesterday that "I am ready to vote."

La Guardia argued it was to be expected that the "prohibitionists" would seize upon the opportunity of going on record on the Blaine resolution proposing repeal of the amendment. In the present Congress, he added, the drys know they have an overwhelming majority in both houses and therefore want to do their bawling before anything happens to cut their strength.

There is no argument, he continued, but that the "prohibition group" has the votes to do what it wants. La Guardia today was the center of the prohibition controversy at the House side. At his request the House yesterday had postponed for a day consideration of the $15,000,000 appropriation bill for the treasury-post office supply bill for prohibition enforcement.

The delay was to enable the New Yorker to collect material, and today he had surrounded himself with many books, documents and papers. La Guardia said the appropriation should be "eliminated because the Eighteenth Amendment never had been constitutionally ratified. He announced, before beginning his address, that when he concluded his would have proved that because of the Article III of the amendment, sufficient states had not ratified it. He did not at the time of this announcement disclose the line of argument leading to the conclusion.

Among others discussing prohibition, Representative Britten, Republican, Illinois, one of the leaders of the House wet group, said in a statement that if the dry leaders were sincere they would seek a "test vote" on modification of the Volstead act instead of repeal of the amendment.

RAPIDS PREPARING MINSTREL PROGRAM.
Rapid Hose Fire Company, that will stage its annual minstrel show in Kingston High School auditorium on the evenings of February 3 and 4, is now preparing a program which is to be made up of advertisements given by merchants of this city. Raymond Schatzel and Jacob Port, members of the program committee, are now soliciting advertisements. They already have procured a large number, but will continue their canvass for several days.

The Rapid's show is well under way, and the routine laid out by Director Eddie Bartop, former professional performer, promises that the minstrel will be a treat. Besides the regular minstrel program, Mr. Bartop has injected a number of novelties into the show, which promises to be bigger and better than last year's successful performances.

A rehearsal for the minstrel will be held Monday evening at 8 o'clock in the Rapid's engine house on Howe street. Every member of the cast is asked to be present. The practice will start promptly.

EXCELSIOR HOSE TO HOLD ANNUAL BANQUET.
The annual banquet of Excelsior Hose Company will be held Monday evening at 9 o'clock at the Stuyvesant Hotel. City officials and the members of the fire board will be the guests of the company that night. Ambulance Calls.
Mower's private ambulance conveyed a patient of Dr. Ross from below Port Ewen to the Kingston Hospital for treatment for a broken leg. The same ambulance conveyed Frank Burgher, the veteran Prudential insurance agent, from the Kingston Hospital to his home, No. 12 Washington avenue, he having undergone a very serious operation some time ago.

Disturbance central near Cape Hatteras will move northeastward with rapidly increasing intensity attended by gales diminishing late tonight.

Cold, Death and Privation Stalk Over Southwest

Fourteen Dead as Temperature Records of Decades Fall in a Dozen States—Serious Loss of Livestock Feared.

Kansas City, Jan. 18 (AP).—Cold, death and privation stalked hand in hand over the southwest today as the van of a blizzard, slowly making its exit from the northern Rocky Mountain states, roared out over the Gulf of Mexico. Temperature records of decades fell in a dozen states. Fourteen lives were taken.

Approximately 50 persons were believed marooned in snow drifts dumped over the north by the most severe storm of years. Telephone and telegraph wires were down and highways were impassable, hampering rescue operations.

Serious loss of livestock was feared. From the sheep country of Wyoming to the cattle ranges of Texas.

Rising temperatures were predicted for Wyoming, Colorado and New Mexico today but Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and points even farther east were in the grip of one of the most severe cold waves of their history. Texas particularly was hard hit, a hard driven snow adding to the misery of a cold to which that state is unused.

At Shamrock, Texas, 140 persons were fighting against death by cold and starvation. They went there expecting to find work on a projected railroad, only to find that construction will not be started until spring. Welfare organizations of the town of 5,000 persons were swamped by demands upon them. The coldest place in the state was in the Panhandle, where eight below was recorded, but clear to the Mexican border the snow and icy wind held sway.

A reading of 25 degrees below zero at Barnsdall, Okla., was believed an all time record for the state, in the absence of official figures. Highway traffic and even railroads were demoralized by snow.

Kansas City expected 15 below this morning, the lowest since 1924, and points in western Kansas were even colder. A 15-inch snow of a week ago has been packed and frozen to an icy blanket over the state.

Although the Rocky Mountain states had hope, they also still had the final blast of the blizzard which struck them three days ago.

Business Men Plan for Sale Here Next Week
Members of the Kingston Uptown Business Men's Association are making great preparations for their big cooperative clearance sale which will be held Wednesday, January 22. At that time merchants in all lines of business will offer special inducements to shrewd shoppers.

In many lines of business the spring line of merchandise will be coming in shortly and there must be room to display the new shipments. In order to clean up stocks of winter merchandise the merchants will hold their big co-operative sale next week for one day only. On that one day every merchant will make a special effort to price merchandise attractively so that stocks will be moved.

Kingston always has a "Good Place to Shop" will be an especially good place to shop next Wednesday and naturally the early shopper will receive the cream of the bargains.

The stores will not remain open in the evening.

PORTUGUESE BUILDS ROADS AS BAIT FOR TOURISTS
Lisbon (AP).—Portugal, which before the advent of the dictatorship boasted only of a few good roads has since energetically set to the task of meeting that deficiency.

Impassable holes have been filled and paved, several hundred miles of new roads built and others macadamized.

The Portuguese roads may not be so wide and well drained as some of the fine continental highways, but the surface is as good; there are no hedge obstructions, and they are often dead straight for miles after mile. Despite gradients, motoring accidents are few.

The Government is alive to the importance of tourist trade as a source of national income. A national "Office of Tourism" has been established which is showing much activity.

WOULD DISCONTINUE AGENT AT WHITEPORT.
Albany, Jan. 18.—Application has been made to the Public Service Commission by the New York Central Railroad (West Shore) for permission to discontinue Whiteport, accepting as a non-agency station. The company states that the freight revenue was $259 and the passenger revenue $175. The salary of the agent is approximately $1,760 a year. The company asks that it be permitted to make Binswatter the governing station except that carload freight will still continue to be handled at Whiteport. Public hearing will follow.

Reparations Protocol to Be Signed Monday

The Hague, Jan. 18 (AP).—Delegates to the second session of the Hague Reparation Conference on application of the Young plan expected today to leave this city Monday, after formal signing of a protocol making the Young plan effective.

The last obstacle to signing of the protocol was relieved in a session last night at which agreement was reached on a point of issuance of the first reparation bonds. Members of the Little Entente, their meeting lasting well into this morning, agreed to disagree, and to continue their conferences at Paris after adjournment of the Hague meeting.

In order to furnish Germany money needed for railroads and other internal needs it was decided to increase the first issue of reparation bonds from $200,000,000 to $300,000,000, with the amount of the increase assigned to Germany. The bonds will be issued to bear from 5 to 6 per cent interest.

The Germans agreed to abstain from making other loans until October, at which time it was supposed the first issue of the reparation bonds will have been floated. If they have not been floated by that time, the Germans agree not to seek money abroad before a year from next April.

Probably 20 per cent of the $300,000,000 bonds will be offered in the United States, France taking 40 per cent and Germany and Great Britain each 20 per cent. Each subscribing country may, however, place their allotment in other countries.

The plan evolved was a compromise, Germany having resisted demands of the creditor nations, particularly France, that she agree not to seek other foreign loans until the reparation bonds were marketed, since their value might thus be destroyed.

The problem presented by the failure of the smaller reparation creditors, particularly Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Rumania, to agree with Austria, Hungary and Bulgaria on the matter of eastern or oriental reparations remains the one outstanding phase of the reparation settlement.

Urged on by the western creditors, the delegations of these countries met last night and agreed for this morning to ascertain if some settlement which will permit their signing the protocol making the Young plan effective Monday morning was not possible.

Finally, however, they had to cease their efforts and announce that the discussions would be continued in Paris immediately.

Philip Snowden, British chancellor of the exchequer, was caustic in his comment on their failure to agree.

"There are two courses open to us," he said. "The first is to postpone the conference and to delay judgment. The second is to lock the interested parties in a room without food or water until they come to an agreement. I prefer the second course and propose it."

THREE GUARDSMEN UNDER ARREST FOR BRIBERY
Buffalo, Jan. 18 (AP).—Accused of accepting a bribe from a rum runner for the release of a seized speedboat, three coast guardsmen were under arrest in the Erie county jail today and a countrywide search was under way for a fourth man.

Coast guard authorities said the four guardsmen after seizing a speedboat in Toledo harbor, accepted a $2,500 bribe from a Toledo bootlegger named Courtney for the release of the craft. The boat later was again captured and Courtney then made his charges.

Lieutenant M. W. Rasmussen, district commander of the coast guard, said one of the men under arrest had confessed. The men are Joseph Libby, W. E. Wynder and W. J. Blackless. They are alleged to have received $500 each while the missing man received $1,000. The men had been stationed at Fort Clinton, Ohio.

Three other coast guardsmen are also under arrest, but Lieutenant Rasmussen said they are charged with desertion and had no connection with the alleged bribery.

DECLARE CHANGE IS REQUIRED IN ESOPUS.
Albany, Jan. 18.—Alleging that public safety requires a change in the existing crossing of the Old Post State Highway and the New York Central tracks in the town of Esopus, Ulster county, the State Department of Public Works today petitioned the Public Service Commission for an order determining the manner in which the road to be reconstructed shall cross the railroad tracks. The highway now crosses the tracks on a bridge.

TWO GIRLS MISSING AND SUICIDE FEARED.
The Kingston police department has been asked to watch out for two young girls, Rose and Violet Edwards, sisters, 13 and 14 years old, who disappeared Friday from the home of their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Foster N. Edwards, at Athens, where they had been living. According to the Catskill Mail the girls left a note in which they stated they were going to commit suicide by jumping into the river.

Claims Mr. Wells Stepped In Front of His Auto

Howard C. Anderson Testifies He Was Traveling About 30 Miles An Hour and Attempted to Avoid Striking Deputy Sheriff—Adjournment Taken Until January 22.

Howard C. Anderson of Accord waived his rights of immunity Friday and appeared before Coroner Howard B. Humiston, who was conducting an inquest to determine the facts surrounding the death of Deputy Sheriff Peter W. Wells of Stone Ridge. Mr. Wells was struck by a Ford car driven by young Anderson on Saturday, January 11, while crossing the road nearly in front of his home. At that time Anderson claims he was traveling about 30 miles an hour and when he noticed Mr. Wells in the road he attempted to avoid him but he claims Mr. Wells stepped in front of his car and was struck. After striking Mr. Wells, Anderson said he lost control of his car momentarily and then regained control and stopped the car. When the car came to a stop it was in the front yard of the Ira Turner home adjoining the M. E. parsonage, something over 100 feet from where it is supposed the man was struck.

The body of Mr. Wells was still underneath the car and in order to release the body, the Rev. Harder, Mr. Turner and his son assisted in lifting the car and extricating the body which was caught under the rear end of the car somewhere about the head and shoulders with the feet extending out from under the car at the rear. The body lay face down and had been dragged by the car.

When taken from under the car all of the witnesses testified Mr. Wells was dead.

Anderson said he had been involved in two accidents prior to this one, one of which was of little importance.

The inquest was held before Coroner Howard B. Humiston at the supervisors' room in the court house and Glenn B. Murray, assistant district attorney, and N. LeVan Haver conducted the examination of the witnesses for the People.

Anderson was represented by Virgil B. Van Wageningen at whose request several questions were asked witnesses by Mr. Murray.

Dr. Jacobson Testifies
The first witness called was Dr. Joseph Jacobson of this city who with Dr. Hunker of Kerkirauskon performed an autopsy on the body of Mr. Wells. Dr. Jacobson stated that there were several injuries any one of which was serious enough to have been the cause of death. There were many abrasions on the body, head, scalp and face; a compound fracture of the nose; fractured right leg; the base of the skull; twenty-two fractures of the ribs with the fractures overlapping; and the ribs telescoping and puncturing the lungs; internal injuries; a cut on the face through which the intestine protruded and the pelvis was forced apart some four inches.

Dr. Jacobson said the injuries were of such a character and so numerous that it was impossible to tell from which direction the man was struck. He had evidently been struck with "great force."

Trooper Linn Baker was next called. He received a call at Highland and drove with Trooper Mulsh to the scene. The call was received at about 9 o'clock the night of January 11. He picked up Trooper Maish at New Paltz. He arrived at Stone Ridge before the body of Mr. Wells had been taken away but it had been moved from the place where it had been found after the accident.

Trooper Talked to Anderson.
The Ford car which was a cabriolet was on the front lawn of a house just to the west of the Rev. Harder's place. The car had crossed a ditch and ran up a small embankment and came to rest on the lawn. Howard C. Anderson said he had been driving the car. Trooper Baker said he looked over the situation and talked to Anderson. He was told that the car was on the way to Kingston. Anderson said he was traveling between 30 and 32 miles an hour when he met a car traveling in the opposite direction. That was near the intersection of the High Falls road just to the west. After he passed that car he saw a man about 30 feet in front of his car walking in the highway on the right of the center of the road on the concrete. He pulled to the right to pass the man but the man lurched that way and he pulled back to pass on the left and the man then moved that way and he was struck. He told the trooper he had tried to avoid the man but could not. He thought it was below the intersection of the High Falls road that the accident happened. When he struck the man the car had gone over to the left of the road and up on the lawn and garden of Mr. Turner.

Trooper Baker said he had been unable to locate anyone who had seen the car which Anderson alleges was going in the opposite direction. The accident happened according to what Anderson told the trooper, very near to an electric light at the intersection and within a short distance of Mr. Wells's home.

The Ford car was some distance from the scene of the impact. The Trooper said the front bumper

$50,000 To $75,000 Fire Damage in Pittman Home
Washington, Jan. 18 (AP).—Fire destroyed the home of Senator Key Pittman of Nevada, early today, wiping out one of the show places of suburban Washington.

Senator and Mrs. Pittman escaped uninjured and were able to remove considerable furniture and personal effects from the reach of the flames.

The Pittman home is an extensive estate on Ridge road, near the Maryland line, with extensive grounds overlooking the Potomac. The residence was a two and one half story frame building. The upper stories were completely wrecked and the apartments below stairs were badly damaged by water. Senator Pittman estimated the loss at from $50,000 to $75,000.

The Senator said he was aroused by smoke at 3:30 a. m. and, after awakening Mrs. Pittman, they dressed hurriedly and proceeded to carry furniture outside assisted by servants, whose quarters were undamaged.

The firemen encountered several handicaps in battling the blaze. Snow was falling heavily and this, interchanged to rain. Fire hydrants were at a considerable distance and hose lines of from a quarter to a half mile had to be laid. All the apparatus in that section of the District of Columbia had to be called before sufficient hose was available.

MacDonald Tackles Double Task During London Arms Parley

By FRANK HAVILAND KING
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

London (AP).—Americans who saw Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald last autumn knew that he has broad shoulders.

And that he needs them and all the resources of his rugged physique there is no doubt. For on January 21 he will shoulder the heaviest burden of a British statesman in recent years when he balances on either side of his massive head the tasks of steering his minority Labor government through parliament and at the same time of acting as Chief British delegate to the Five Power naval conference.

Parliament and the conference meet the same day, the Commons at one end of the halls of Westminster, the armaments delegates in the royal gallery of the House of Lords at the other end.

Naturally to attempt the dual task of leadership might easily result in failure of both, and MacDonald will name as deputy leader of the House, his right hand man, Philip Snowden, chancellor of the exchequer, who by his conduct of British affairs at The Hague international conference last summer won full confidence of the British nation, irrespective of party.

Still the final responsibility will be the prime minister's. Crises will face the government as they have nearly every month since Labor took power. Some of them have been minor demonstrations of discontent; others, such as the government's narrow escape just before Christmas on the coal industry bill, have been major issues which if not handled with all the combined skill and resources of the Labor party would have resulted in political disaster for MacDonald.

The task the prime minister faces for the next few months would dismay a man of lesser strength, and may even tax the stamina of the sturdy Scot. English public officials believe that an American president works harder than any other man in public life, combining as he does executive, social and numberless other tasks which in this country are distributed among king, prime minister, royalty and responsible cabinet ministers.

The fragile breakdowns of Woodrow Wilson and of his successor, President Harding, still are fresh in the minds of British observers of American public affairs. From time to time rumors about MacDonald's health are circulated, but it can be stated with greatest authority that he is stronger and better prepared to face heavy duties than at any time since his illness in America in 1927.

Nevertheless for weeks the Labor Chieftain's friends have been using every opportunity to guard his health and conserve his energies for the tasks which will fall to him at a season of the year in London when physical resistance to an uncertain winter climate is at its lowest ebb.

January, February and March are far from salubrious months here. It is then that Englishmen of wealth hunt Riviera sunshine or the bracing cold of Switzerland, arming themselves against the rigors of English springtime.

Little apprehension exists in England that MacDonald will overtax himself, for although the six months' work just rounded out as prime minister have been as intense as any period of his career, he guards his health with great care. Complete relaxation is a part of his daily routine.

Hours are spent with his sons and daughters and in discussion with intimate friends of art and books. After strenuous sessions of work he loses himself in subjects far removed from government, books and nature, travel and autobiography.

At the age of 63 his days of strenuous physical exercise are past; even golf which is an all the year game in Britain and at which MacDonald is a Scotman naturally excels, is largely reserved for summer holidays.

Britain's prime minister, in short, is taking no chances with his health. Idealistic statesmanship dominates his life, and the Conference over which he will preside in London offers the greatest opportunity of his career.

GERMANS URGE EUROPEAN UNION AS BAR TO WAR

Berlin (AP).—Opinions are divided in Germany as to the feasibility of creating a pan-European, but agreement prevails in many political and industrial circles that some kind of a closer fusion of the continental nations has become imperative.

The realization has been spreading that Europe is on the verge of becoming another Balkan hotbed, with nations armed to the teeth confronting each other and in constant danger of starting another war conflagration through some error or mistrust.

Even those not advocating the pan-European idea admit that it would at least eliminate the menace of Germany's being swamped by more powerful neighbors. As Erich Koch, the Reichstag deputy from Wessertal, and a close friend of the late Dr. Stresemann, writes, Germany's geographical position is the most unfavorable imaginable for war. But in a definitely peaceful Europe, that same location would make her the most favored country, providing her foreign representatives are clever enough to nip any attempt at a fusion under the political and economic influence of some other power.

As the method of Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, for the consummation of the pan-European idea is considered by many too complicated, political industrial leaders of Germany are more inclined to favor a central European fusion as was advocated before the war by the former under-secretary of state, Friedrich Naumann.

They have revived Naumann's argument that Germany's future lies in a central European alliance to be extended towards the southeast by the successive adherence of countries in which the German language, German traditions and German sciences continue to be popular.

In this connection Deputy Koch and others of his persuasion would see the nation take a greater interest in that Jewish element, somewhat scornfully designated in Germany as "Ostjuden" (Jews of Eastern Europe) who, they say, have fulfilled a great German mission in countries where they sought refuge in the Middle Ages from German persecution. They acted as promoters of the German language. It is argued, for their Jewish German is a modern adaption of the old high German.

"England which has the faculty of turning every opportunity to its advantage," writes Herr Koch, "would have known better how to treat these Jews than we did during our occupation of Poland."

ENGLAND MAY REQUIRE COWCATCHERS ON AUTOS

London (AP).—A man catcher attached to the front of all motor vehicles is the latest device being tested by the Ministry of Transport in an effort to reduce the growing toll of fatal street accidents in Great Britain. Deaths average 15 a day.

The new life-guard is fitted to cover the front wheels of cars, much like a cow-catcher on a train, and is designed to carry the car's victim along the road. Each cross-bar of the guard is fitted with a sponge-like material, and at the bottom a rubber fender prevents legs or arms from getting under the wheels.

Tests by the Ministry of Transport included long hours with a dummy figure that was thrown into the path of a fast moving one-ton truck from all conceivable angles. The dummy was not once run over.

REMOVING THE CAUSE OF COLDS

Improper elimination of waste matter puts the body in a rundown condition, permitting a cold to develop in the system. The cold may express itself in catarrh of the head, in tonsillitis, in sore throat, in bronchitis, or if not checked in time, it may become influenza or pneumonia.

So a cold means many things to many people. No matter in what form it may express itself, there is a spinal nerve congestion, causing under-activity of the eliminative organs. If the liver is weak, it throws more work on the skin, kidneys and lungs, and so it goes. Whatever eliminative organ is weakened, it overworks the others. If two or all of them are weakened, and they sometimes break down under the overwork, then pneumonia, influenza, tuberculosis, or other extreme diseases may result. The extraordinary record of recoveries in these diseases from Chiropractic spinal treatments is based on the fact that the cause is reached, and Nature, when given a fair chance, has more than enough reserve strength to eliminate disease. The Chiropractic spinal treatments release the normal degree of nerve force into the weakened organs, and Nature's reserve forces are given a chance.

J. L. MacKINNON.

OUT IN THREE DAYS.

"I was taken with a cold Sunday night. My nose stopped up, my throat was sore, my head ached, and I had some fever. I started Chiropractic spinal treatments on Monday. The fever and headache disappeared, my bowels came back to normal, and my head began to clear. On Tuesday I got up. On Wednesday I could swallow again, the soreness in the throat was gone. I never got rid of a cold so quickly before."

—Lorene Carr, Chiropractic Research Bureau, Statement No. 1353-F.

Our success is due to our policy of never accepting cases that we cannot benefit.

In addition to the training received at the world's most prominent Chiropractic universities, supplemented by fifteen years' actual practice and observation, we have originated and are using our own system of painless treatment which is a distinct advance over methods commonly in use.

Izaak Walton League Meeting

Izaak Walton League met Friday evening at the county court house with about 80 members in attendance. Nicholas Camelo, state organizer, presented the new chapter, No. 117, with its charter. There are present more than 100 members in the newly formed organization, and the chapter will be kept open until the next meeting, February 6, so that persons wishing to join may be classified as charter members until that date.

Mr. Camelo outlined the work and purpose of the league, explaining that its primary purpose was to protect life by guarding the same, cleaning the streams and creating a friendly feeling between the farmer and sportsman. He thanked the new organization for the cooperation it had extended him, and promised the group that it would number over 500 members before another year.

The state president or state secretary has been promised as the speaker for the next meeting. A motion picture depicting game in their natural haunts will also be shown at this time, Mr. Camelo said. He stated that anyone wishing to join the league should make application to Harry Styles.

MODERNIZATION OF ARMY GOES FORWARD

Secretary Orders Infantry Battalion Experiment.

Washington.—Modernization of the American army, through the introduction of greater fire power, mobility and capacity for sustained effort on the battle front into the infantry combat arm, was moved a step nearer fulfillment by Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley.

On the recommendation of Gen. Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff, the war secretary issued orders calling for the organization at once of an experimental infantry battalion with sufficient additional automatic weapons to double the fire power of the present infantry unit of this size.

More Automatic Weapons.

The new infantry battalion will give the army the most compact, powerful and independent combat unit in the history of the American military establishment. It will have 25 per cent more men than the present organization, twice as many automatic rifles, twice as many 30-caliber machine guns, and four 50-caliber machine guns, for use against attacking aircraft and tanks, and introduce two 37-millimeter guns and two 75-millimeter mortars into the infantry unit. The mortars and 37-millimeter guns, formerly a part of the equipment of the old regimental howitzer company, are added to the armament of the battalion headquarters company.

The experimental battalion, composed of 1,178 men, will be armed with a total of 523 rifles, 108 automatic rifles, 24 50-caliber machine guns, four 30-caliber machine guns, two 37-millimeter guns, one-pounders, and two 75-millimeter mortars. The present organization has 544 rifles and 12 30-caliber machine guns. The regimental howitzer company, which is armed with the 37-millimeter mortars, would be abolished if the new experimental organization were adopted as standard for the army.

World War Equipment Still Used.

The step taken by Secretary Hurley recently marks probably the greatest stride the War Department has taken toward bringing the army up to date. The army at present is equipped with World War equipment, although its present infantry organization is the result of two years' study made by a special board immediately after the war.

The new organization is designed to give the basic infantry combat unit greater fire power and more mobility without increasing its vulnerability. Whether the new organization will be found satisfactory is still to be determined. It is certain, however, that changes of some kind will be made.

Coads Wonder What Kind of Girl Men Like

Madison, Wis.—University of Wisconsin coeds are up in arms because a prominent fraternity man has said that a girl to be popular must not smoke, drink, or neck.

The controversy arose after a questionnaire appeared in the Daily Cardinal, student newspaper, on the subject: "What kind of girls do college men like to date, and if so, why do they always go out with the other kind?"

Men don't seem to know what they want, one coed yelled. "A girl should not drink, smoke, or neck, but do many men date those who don't?" "If a girl acts sweet and simple, she is too naïve. If she is sophisticated they think she is throwing the dog, and if she tries to be just natural, she's considered prosaic."

As a counter attack, another coed presented a list of qualifications demanded to a man by herself.

"He need not be handsome or a 'W' man, or a well-known campus figure," she explained. "Neatness in dress and general good taste, a good heart, gentleness, and ambition are much more important. He must admire intelligence in women and date them for companionship and not merely for a good necking party."

The New Neckwear

Many of the new silks resemble woolen fabrics in both weave and color. It is predicted that this innovation will bring forth new enthusiasm for dainty cuffs and collars. Many neckwear displays include entire collars made of real lace as well as doilies. Balise is also offering a refreshing note in neckwear circles.

Mature Woman Is Gainer in Modes

Subtle Lines, Gorgeous Fabrics, Dainty Colorings for Matrons.

Whatever the outcome of the present battle of the modes, now being waged so merrily on both sides of the Atlantic, one person is definitely the gainer. And that is the woman of maturity, of poise and experience, who suddenly finds herself the center of the fashion picture after a decade of neglect in favor of the insistent demands of youth, and youth alone. Many of the smartest of the new fashions, observes a writer in the New York Times, are definitely designed to suit this type of woman. Their subtle lines, gorgeous fabrics, sophisticated colorings make them ideal for the woman of distinction who knows how to wear her clothes rather than merely put them on. For the first time since the war she may revel in shopping tours which provide dozens of costumes, and bewildering arrays of accessories to enhance her charms. In place of the boyishly simple and casual sports frocks, and rags of chiffon of yesterday.

These clothes are not cheap. Neither are they easily copied. They point to a certain formality in the life of the wearer. In other words, they are the aristocrats of the mode. And they are finding eager buyers among women who have a large enough clothes budget to afford them, a varied social existence in which to wear them, and sufficient imagination to rejoice that they need no longer look just like every one else.

The very color story of the winter is one of sophistication. Black and dead white, and the combination of black and white, are at the height of their vogue. The purple shades launched by Patou last summer have increased steadily in importance and are shown in a whole range of lovely dainty colorings for afternoon and evening. The touch of gold and silver, the glint of bronze, the warm rusts and tawny shades in daytime tweeds are all as smart as they are becoming to the women of mature years.

Fur Is Prominent.

Fabrics tell the same tale. Velvets, laines, galles and broadcloths—all these are excellently suited to the wardrobe of the older woman. Furs are richer and more luxurious than ever before and silver foxes, minks, sables and broadtail play leading roles in midwinter fashion. Even the lines of the new silhouette have proved a boon to the matron as well as a joy to the debutante, for they are slenderizing, lengthening, and lend themselves to many clever adjustments if one's figure leaves something to be desired. The sophisticated woman eschews the fussy and ornate as she would a plague. Simplicity remains the keynote of her wardrobe. But it is the subtle simplicity of the artist rather than the artisan. This is especially evident in the tweeds and jerseys which form the basis of the daytime mode and which now, by interesting detail, clever cut and perfect workmanship, add real distinction to their youthful charm.

A typical example is the Vionnet coat chosen for illustration. This is developed in a simple, loosely worn tweed in the brown and beige mixture so much in favor at the moment. Ever so slightly this coat molds the figure and suggests the curves of youth. A characteristic Vionnet touch is the diagonal seam at the hips which gives shape to the garment, and is repeated in the front darts, which follows the line of the new silhouette without shortening the figure. Deep cuffs, a short roll collar and square vest of brown gaiyak are most becoming, and give a slightly formal air to a coat which is equally good for town or country. There are any number of lightweight woolen frocks, in Jersey or sheer tweeds by Lelong, Molynieux or Chanel which might be chosen to accompany such a frock.

The afternoon mode is of especial interest to the smart matron, for it fits in definitely with her scheme of life. Sports frocks and evening gowns divide honors with the younger set, but the woman of maturity finds many occasions for the afternoon costume on formal lines. Ensembles are important, and the three-quarter coat of black suede-finished broadcloth, fur-trimmed, with blouse of satin or tulle, is pre-eminently a fashion for the older woman. Lelong makes such a suit, the flared skirt mounted on a fitted 'joke, and worn about eight inches below the knee, the three-quarter coat banded in black gaiyak which makes the shawl collar and the cuffs. This had a blouse of silver lame and was worn with Patou's draped tunic of broadcloth and gaiyak, and his flat muffs of gaiyak with the bow.

Trailing Skirts for Evenings. The black flat crepe frock, beloved by the Parisienne, is the very basis of the wardrobe, and interesting variations appeared in all the leading collections. Fur is much used to trim the street or afternoon frock of silk as well as cloth. One model is banded with satin black gaiyak, in effective contrast with the dead black of the crepe, and matches a three-quarter coat of the gaiyak. The bloused bodice on this frock was introduced by Patou and is especially good for the figure no longer in its first youth. The long lines of the skirt, pointed in the front, give an effect of height. Tiny tucks mold the front of the bodice, to give a semi-draped effect, and the how neckline is both smart and flattering.

It is in the evening mode, however, that the woman who has arrived at years of discretion really comes into her own. Trailing skirts, gorgeous wraps, glittering jewels—all these have just a little the effect of masquerade when worn by the debutante. But they are the rightful properties of the matrons, whose sophisticated beauty they reveal in its proper setting. Why is it that one sees so many more attractive women at evening parties this season than three years ago? They were all there then—and three years younger! But today's fashion, in its infinite variety, gives an opportunity to exploit one's own particular type, rather than to be merged in a group where each woman wore the same simple dance frock, and only youth could hope to triumph.

Dead White Satin Used.

An evening frock of dead white crepe satin is an excellent example of the new sophistication. Soft shirrings break the severity of the princess line at the back, and fitted side sections merge in a double train which lends dignity to the wearer. The deep V décolletage reaches almost to the waistline, and the only touch of decoration is lent by two flowers of the material posed on the right shoulder. With this was worn an adaptation of Chanel's short cape, in black velvet lined with ermine. A fan of black tulle, slipper of black with ornaments of rhinestones and baguette crystals, which also made large cluster earrings, were the other accessories.

Chiffon and marquisette make the most enchanting negligees and run the gamut of variety in color. The pastel shades are in greatest demand, with brilliant scarlet, jade and yellow for those who have a penchant for vivid tones. All of these are cut with long skirts that follow the contour of the figure, and trail in separate panels after the models from Patou. In some of the late designs lace is introduced as an underdress, in flares and for neck trimming and sleeves. In a gown of pale gray marquisette a cape collar and wide circular cuffs are made of yellow lace. One of peace-colored chiffon has "angel" sleeves of the goods that reach to the bottom of the gown.

A model in maize-colored chiffon is lifted at the natural waistline with a cluster of vertical tucks in the fabric, which sweeps away in wide folds, touching the floor at the sides and back. A bow of sheer lace is fastened at the neck and close about the wrists. The sleeves are long and in the mousquetaire style.

Fancy Seaming

Little frocks and informal daytime dresses make much of fancy seaming. A navy blue flat crepe frock has its drop yoke, its skirt and its inverted box plating all let in with a touch of red in the seaming. Flirt frocks often have satin seaming and vice versa.

of the Ford was bent back about in the middle, the radiator was bent in to the fan and the fan pulley pierced the radiator and the fan was also damaged by the blow.

On being questioned by the Trooper as to where the man was when he first saw him Anderson said he was in the center of the right hand strip of concrete and walking toward Kingston in the same direction in which the Ford was traveling. The man was about 30 feet ahead and appeared to be confused when the car approached. Anderson also told the Trooper that he had but little time to stop.

Skid Marks on Concrete.

Baker testified that there were skid marks on the concrete 130 feet from where the car stopped. They led from where the accident occurred to the left of the road and up to where the Ford car stood. The scene of the impact was at telephone pole 2771. The pavement was dry. In addition to the skid marks there was glass on the pavement. The skid marks were first observed 130 feet to the rear of the Ford car and after being distinct for a distance let up for a short space and they could again be distinctly seen. The ditch through which the Ford ran was about a foot deep and a foot or foot and a half wide. The skid marks started from the right of the road.

Sergeant Hopkins Called.

Sergeant John A. Hopkins of the Ellenville outpost was called. He went to the scene the following morning. At Rev. Harder's and at Mr. Turner's he questioned those who had seen the car before it was moved. Mr. Harder, Mr. Turner and Mr. Turner's son took him to the scene and pointed out where the accident had happened and where the car stood as they recalled it. They said they heard an impact and went out and found the car on the Harder lawn. The body of Mr. Wells was underneath the rear of the Ford and they lifted the car up to remove it.

Anderson, they told Sergeant Hopkins, had told them how the accident happened. It was practically as Trooper Baker testified Anderson told him on the night it took place. Turner at the request of Hopkins paced off the distance from where it was stated the impact took place and over to where the Ford was after it had stopped. It was 30 paces.

After talking to Harder, Turner and his son, he went to Accord and talked to Anderson. He stated that the accident was unavoidable. He said he had been driving about 30-32 miles an hour on his way to Kingston and had passed a car going out and the lights had affected him for a brief time and when he again noticed the road in front he saw a man on the pavement. He observed the man turn first toward the right of the road and then back toward the left. The man hesitated and then stepped in front of the car and was hit. It was near the intersection and to the right of the road where the accident happened. He told Sergeant Hopkins that he did not recall if he sounded his horn or not as the whole thing happened so quick. It was about 8:45 o'clock when the accident happened according to the statement of Anderson on the day following the accident.

Sergeant Hopkins said Mr. Wells lived to the left of the road as he was proceeding toward Kingston. He said there was a dirt side-path between the houses and the ditch on the left of the road coming toward Kingston. Hopkins placed the scene of the accident as 300 or more feet from the Wells home. The car came to a stop on the same side of the road as is located the Wells home.

Dr. Charles F. Sherman called. He received a call at his home in Stone Ridge between 9 and 9:30 that night. He went to the scene about 1 1/2 miles away. The man was on the ground at the rear of the Ford. He recognized the man as Mr. Wells. He examined him and found him dead. He asked Anderson to call the coroner and Troopers and he did. He made no examination of the body which was about two feet from the car and lying on the pathway between Harders and Turners.

Tr. Turner called. He lives on the west of the road next to Harders. There is a part dirt and part stone pathway along the roadway in front of his place and adjoining places.

Snow Followed Colder Weather

Old Man Winter after enveloping the city with colder weather on Friday decided to give further evidence that he was still in existence and this morning when householders awoke it was to find the ground covered with snow and a snowstorm in progress. Snow fell throughout the morning, but the temperature was much milder than it was on Friday.

City Ready to Remove Snow

Superintendent Frank Mills, of the board of public works, stated this morning that he had his snow removal equipment all ready and could proceed within five minutes to remove snow when it became necessary to do so. As the snow continued to fall throughout the morning it was not expected that any attempt would be made to move the snow until tonight. If necessary extra men will be put to work on the snow removal job.

"Dutch Treat" Makes No Hit With Modern Girl

To the young man who writes to ask if it is proper to let the girls pay for their share of an evening's entertainment we reply that it is. Perfectly proper but highly improbable.

Experiments have been made in this direction, but somehow or other they didn't work. Even when the girls propose the idea it doesn't make a bit with them if the boys take them too literally in the final settlement. Postscript, the girls don't like it. May be it is because women are more conservative than men, and one of her inherited privileges is to say that the woman pays while she sees that the man does it.

Of course, when the girls suggest a ditch their wise thing is to seem to fall in with the idea, and then to buzz your own girl into granting you the very special favor of letting you pay her shot. You can do this in the strictest confidence and with the safe promise not to tell anyone. You won't have to tell. The chances are that all the other boys are begging—and receiving—the same inestimable favor of paying the bill.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Bear's Propensity for Hugging Termed Myth

The proverbial hugging propensity of bears is probably a myth, notwithstanding a vast amount of alleged testimony to the contrary. Literature, reference books and works on natural history contain numerous references to the "crushing embrace" or "dentally lung" of bears. Pope, for instance, says, "Tis a bear's talent not to kick, but hug." Nearly all careful observers are agreed that this notion is erroneous. Dr. W. Reid Blair, director of the New York Zoological park, says on this subject: "In regard to the proverbial hug, the story is apparently devoid of foundation. A bear, on account of its anatomical structure, strikes round with its paws as if grasping, and the blow of its powerful arm drives its claws into the body of its victim, which action apparently gave rise to its hugging reputation."—Exchange.

ROYALTY STILL LIVES.

The violent upheavals in all the principalities of Germany and Austria after the World War inclined the distant observer toward the conviction that royalty was "done for," but the conditions attending recent royal marriages in Europe convey the distinct impression that any such conviction is hasty. This later impression is particularly strong after reading the accounts of the nuptials of Princess Marie Jose of Belgium and Crown Prince Humbert of Italy. The genuine enthusiasm displayed by the Italian populace admits of no mistake. Royalty is still venerated, and apparently even loved, in Europe.

Even the mighty Mussolini joined in the howling and screeching before the happy royal couple, this perhaps being the most significant fact in all the notable demonstrations. This is the same Mussolini, all-dominating in politics, who sought a blood alliance between his family and that of the royal house of Italy—an aspiration which all his power failed to bring to the desired fruition, royalty politely sidestepping the unwelcome suggestion. Indirectly the mighty dictator was reminded that he is but an episode of a brief day, while royalty is permanent—no long, at least, as it manages to last. No, royalty is not dead, and for the present at least is very much alive. The most widely popular young man in the world at the present time is not Admiral Byrd or Col. Lindbergh, but H. R. H., the Prince of Wales.

COURTESY AND SAFETY.
 "Give the other guy a break," is the inelegant but expressive slogan of the Motor Courtesy Week about to be observed in another city as introduction to its automobile show. There are in prizes for courteous acts on the part of motorists and prizes for the persons who note and report them.

Courteous driving involves maintaining a speed that neither clogs traffic nor endangers others, approaching with caution crosswalks, full of pedestrians, keeping to the proper lane on any thoroughfare, turning corners with due regard for the rights of other motorists, and so on. Almost any courteous person can think of many routine acts of good drivers which might come under this general heading. Then there are special acts of courtesy, such as helping a fellow motorist in difficulty or avoiding puddles that would splash other cars or pedestrians.

A coincidence, possibly a result of emphasis on politeness, is that not a person was killed or fatally injured in an automobile accident during the motor courtesy weeks of the two preceding years. That is a record that would bear repeating indefinitely.

Main speech is a recognized feature of the present age, but one expects it from the "liberal" or more or less radical press rather than from journals for the "family." The latter have long seemed to uphold the principle that the best way to inculcate morality is to avoid mention of any lapses therefrom, yet now Good Housekeeping, a journal for the correct household, publishes in its September number an article by Rita S. Haile under the heading, "Is My Daughter Safe at College?" which must be described as unexpected. The author says she is just back from a trip through many states and through every kind of college to "find the answer" to her question. What her answer, or some part of it, is may be gathered from her assertion that there certainly is not only "smoking and drinking" but "sexual irregularity in the colleges." Although no doubt the aim in both the writing and the publishing of this article was well meant, its appearance in a "family" periodical is one of the many signs of how changed are the times and how marked the present disposition toward plain speech.

Real estate, according to the president of a big state association, is no longer a mere "selling game," but is becoming a profession. Ethical standards are rising. Better equipment and training are demanded. Real estate men everywhere are organizing and expanding. They concern themselves not merely with selling, but with financing, and are demanding banking facilities on a par with other leading industries. One plan contemplates a national building and loan association modeled after the Federal Reserve Banking system. Publicity is receiving more attention. "Real estate," says a leader, "is the only business which has failed to do great national advertising." He wants bigger advertising appropriations. Also appropriations for research. It begins to look as if we're just emerging into the Real Estate Era.

One thing sure about that London conference—if the powers don't get together on some plan for limitation of armament, there is going to be a new race in building that will make recent competition look like a game of marbles. The situation looks very complicated to statesmen. It looks rather simple to the plain citizens of the countries involved. The latter see two things clearly. First, they want to save the money that is now going into the building and operation of great war machines. Second, they want peace; and having found that big armament does not insure peace, but seems rather to incite war by the friction it causes and the alarm it spreads, they are inclined to try small armament, distributed in about the same proportion among the powers, in the hope that it will work better.

It is stated that the Princess Marie Jose's dowry was no less than $1,000,000, which at 6 per cent interest would yield an income of $300,000. Prince Humbert ought to feel pretty secure as regards this world's goods, no matter if Mussolini should decide not to let him be King. Even the "salary" of $52,000 paid by Mary Pickford to her mother is quite modest by comparison.

WATER WITH MEALS.

One of the theories that was accepted years ago was that the drinking of water before, during, or immediately after meals was unwise as it so diluted the stomach juices—made it so thin—that it lost some of its power to digest food.

As a matter of fact a little fluid before, during and after meals is really helpful as it has been found that the digestive juices, in fact all the juices of the body need plenty of fluid and do their work better if given a good supply of fluid.

This was first noticed when it was discovered years ago that the amount of urine thrown off by the kidneys varied with the amount of water taken.

Now we have supply of water at one time, say three or four glasses, in an individual with a narrow body, which so often means a "dropped stomach," or in an individual whose stomach is pinched down, causes the stomach to creep still further. This means an extra long climb up for the food before it can get out of the stomach into the intestine. This bulk of water also interferes to some extent with the muscular action of the stomach.

However, a Russian research physician, Dr. W. H. GALT, has been able to show that when the water intake is insufficient the amount of stomach digestive juice becomes greatly lessened.

Now this means that a little water should be taken regularly aside from meals.

Dr. Galt points out that babies should be given a little more water than is usually given, because the needs of the youngster are determined by the allowance of the parent or nurse rather than by the instincts of the baby.

A point to remember is that when you eat foods that you like the digestive juices of the mouth and stomach, and even of the pancreas also, begin to flow and the food thus gets a really good start towards digestion.

With food that you do not like there is not such a flow of juice. Therefore it would be wise to drink a little more water with that particular meal. The water helps out in a mechanical way of softening the food and making it more liquid, but also because it really stimulates a greater flow of stomach digestive juice.

In overweight individuals whose tissues hold more water than the tissues of others, the water intake should be guarded. They should drink when thirsty but take only a quarter or half a glassful of water, instead of two or three glassfuls.

A QUESTION OF HONOR

by Ruth Cross

CHAPTER 18

ANNE'S cheek went from scarlet to white. She wrenched fiercely at Glenn's casually restraining hand on her shoulder. All the smoldering rage and humiliation of weeks surged up hotly. "I suppose you want to tell me that I have tracked you down again—that I—" She broke off from sheer inability to keep the quaver out of her voice. She was trembling from head to foot.

"Now, see here," he reasoned calmly, "as far as that night after the storm's concerned, I've already apologized for it—abjectly—in the letter you refused to read, and I don't intend to do it again—Humor still lingered unblinkingly in his gray eyes. "For the rest, it was true, wasn't it? You wanted to strike the spark you're used to seeing in a man's eyes, and—if you get scorched a bit in the subsequent conflagration, you ought to have been a good sport and taken it as a matter of course."

Anne to all appearances was not paying the slightest attention to anything he said. She stood looking angrily about for some means of escape. Glenn went on, however, unperturbed. "What I principally had in mind, though," he said, "was to ask your pardon for boring you with all that stupid talk about myself and my work that afternoon. I was idiot enough to be hurt and offended because you were bored."

In her surprise, Anne lost sight of the fact that she was supposed to be deaf. "But I was not bored."

He smiled. "Your sigh was a mighty good imitation then."

"I sighed because I—I envied you," Anne said slowly, looking down at the toe of her boot. Her anger was ebbing, leaving her ill and faint.

"Enviied me?" he echoed incredulously.

"Yes, I envied you—your work, your usefulness, your enthusiasm. You see, I've never done anything or—been anything worth while—"

She threw out her hands in an unconsciously futile gesture.

"Oh, you can't mean that," he protested seriously.

She nodded, still without looking at him. "Yes, the only real interests I've ever had in life have been spending money and—flirting."

"When I met you—that morning at the spring—But what's the good of telling you? You saw through me at once and—despised me as I deserve. Now, let me go home."

"I must have a look at those scratches first," he reminded her gravely, and swabbed the swelling red welts copiously with antiseptic, from a little bottle he carried.

"Now, if you'll show me the trail," she suggested.

He propped one foot against a fallen log, and leaned toward her, smiling. You can't possibly find it alone," he informed her. "Besides, I'm not through yet. The main thing I wanted to tell you is—I'm going to marry you."

Anne started to laugh, then observed with malicious gravity, "There's just one objection to that. I promised Shub I wouldn't."

"Why, we haven't even known one another," she protested lightly, still declining to treat the matter seriously.

"That's not true," he said, looking straight into her eyes, "is it?"

"Of course it is," she laughed, avoiding his gaze. "And I must really be going." She made a decisive move to pass him, but he only stayed himself more firmly against the log.

"No, you can't get out of it as easily as that. You see, you've started something this time that you can't stop."

"Please—I must go," Anne made another movement to slip past him. He halted and held her; drew her towards him, one hand on either elbow. "You know it was bad policy—letting me kiss your hand that first morning and then—the other—Unless you meant to go through with it—I set up a sort of unquenchable thirst!" He bent over her, his eyes golden with light.

But Anne had not reckoned with Leon Morse nor Douglas, her enemy. New complications developed Monday.

GLOVES AND STOCKINGS MUST BE ATUNE WITH THE COSTUME

New York—Among the highly important things to know is what tones to select for hosiery and gloves. The day has gone when "nude" covered the color situation in so far as stockings were concerned. Now sunlight and sunlight and all sorts of terms are applied to stocking shades which are in truth as varied as the tints different complexions assume during the season process. In one hosiery line, Arabian is given as one of the most important spring shades especially harmonious with purple and blue tints, while wood beige and peach are given as excellent shades to be worn with multicolor prints. It is amusing to note that the drop in hems has not brought about any economy in silk stockings, women still buying all silk hose instead of the little top variety. Naturally the pale pastel shades worn for evening call for such hosiery tints as atmosphere and the palest of peach and pink.

The vogue for black gloves which has been one of the winter's most interesting fashions is expected to abate by spring when white and beige will assume stellar roles. The demand seems to be for pull-ons with some feeling for side openings and for from one to four button models. Among the glove novelties are those in such contrasting kids as light green with beige, brown or black or a color which will fraternize with such costumes as the spring will bring forth. Various strap or bracelet gloves are being offered as suitable for a certain type of suit. Another novelty, intended to accompany the tailleur is a glove with tiny pearl buttons placed in a row either side of an open side vent.

THE SUIT AGAIN BECOMES THE BACKBONE OF THE WARDROBE

New York.—To begin at the beginning of a spring wardrobe one begins with a suit. This is as it was once—perhaps not over more shall be—but as it shall be during the spring of 1930. This much seems definitely settled, although at this season one feels reluctant in making prophecies for soon the curtain will be rung up again on Paris fashion shows after which who can tell what may happen.

Nobody seems to have thumbs down as regards to suits. Even dressmakers are inclined to fall in line to establish them, with the usual dressmaker's touch evidenced in the blouse, or skirt.

There does not seem to be any prospect of the ultra feminism now current, being vanquished by a sturdy masculine style. For one thing the newest suits acknowledge, not to say make the best of, feminine figures, drawing attention to waistlines by way of peplums, or belts or nip in effects with shaped seams and gores. What though mannish materials are used? Or blouses sometimes assume some of the attributes of a shirt? Spring, it is believed, will find us still thoroughly feminine in our clothes expression even though we have consented to buttons and notched velvet collars.

Patou is not the only one who endorses worsteds for suits and dresses which somehow brings up the thought that sailor hats are being attempted by certain French milliners who block them of coarse straw and band them with a grosgrain ribbon after the good old practice of the sailor hats of the Ninety nineties.

"La Parisienne au Bois" is a tailored dress according to the best Patou traditions, with cuttings in the front of the skirt forming pockets, a strap fastening at the front of the skirt replacing the belt, and neck and wrist folds of beige mauve. The dress itself is of brown worsted faintly striped; the buttoners is of one light beige and one dark beige leather flower.

Domestic Duties Of A President's Wife

By Mrs. Calvin Coolidge.

Article 2.

Mrs. Coolidge did not know, until told by a friend, that President Coolidge had issued his famous "I do not choose to run" statement, nor did she know that he was thinking of any such action. "I am rather proud of the fact," she says, "that after nearly a quarter of a century of marriage my husband feels free to make his decisions and act upon them without consulting me or giving me advance information concerning them." This is but one of the remarkable incidents she relates:

In the afternoon of a day late in August, we went to live in that beautiful home which has sheltered every President since President Washington, a home rich in tradition, mellow with years, hallowed through memories. As we passed through the open doorway into the columned corridor, the sun was shining in at the south windows and a soft summer breeze stirred the leaves of the evergreen magnolia outside. Birds were twittering in its branches and the hum of bees and the chirp of crickets mingled in nature's symphonious welcome.

It is difficult to describe my feelings at this time. There was a sense of detachment—this was I, and yet, not I—this was the wife of the President of the United States and she took precedence over me; my personal likes and dislikes must be subordinated to the consideration of those things which were required of her. In like manner, this man at whose side I walked was the President of our great country; his first duty was to his people. It therefore became quite natural to refer to him as The President and to address him as Mr. President in the presence of others.

Deference to the office was required of our children. At luncheon one day during vacation from school, the older boy told his father that he was going to a tea dance, and he might be a little late for dinner and not have time to dress. A moment of silence followed; then his father spoke. "You will remember that you are dining at the table of the President of the United States and you will represent yourself promptly in proper attire."

Once comfortably settled in the rooms at the southwest corner of the house on the second floor, I set about familiarizing myself with the running of the establishment. I found that the domestic problems of the mistress of the White House were not different from those of the housewife of any well-run household. To be sure, a housekeeper was provided whose duty it was to look after the details, but I felt that it was necessary for me to have general oversight.

There were eighteen domestic servants. Among them, there were, in the kitchen, a chief cook, a second cook, a kitchen maid, and a kitchen boy; in the pantry, a butler, a second man, and a pantry man. There were three cleaning women on the main floor and the floor below, and two men on the second floor who cleaned and did valet for guests, two chamber maids, and a valet for the President and a personal maid for his wife. Another maid assisted with the cleaning and did some of the mending. All these servants were on the government payroll, but their food was provided by the President. Some of the maids and the personal maid had rooms on the third floor; the others lived outside.

Our breakfasts were served in our apartment at a quarter before eight. Guests were served in their rooms at any hour designated by them. Luncheon at one o'clock and dinner at seven were served in the State dining-room. Personally, I was partial to the small dining-room on the north side of the house, known as the private dining-room, and would have preferred having luncheon served there, but the President liked the large one better.

The book in which the menus for the day had been written was sent to me with the breakfast tray, and I O. K. ed them, suggesting any changes which I wished to have made. This was then taken to the housekeeper and she did the ordering, usually going to market and making her own selections.

The President was in his office at eight-thirty, unless he had a stenographer come to his study on the second floor to take dictation when he was at work on a message to Congress or an address which he was to make. When he was in his office I made it a point not to disturb him and I know nothing of what took place there. Consistently

I declined to plead anyone's cause, advising them that it would be to their advantage to take the matter up directly with him. What knowledge I had of public affairs I obtained from the daily papers and other sources of information open to everybody. To bear me out in this statement, I will relate what occurred on August 2, 1927.

We were spending the summer in the Black Hills of South Dakota. A Senator from the Middle West was a house guest, a Congressman from nearer east was expected for luncheon. As the President was leaving for his office that morning, he remarked to me, "I have been President four years today." That was all. About two hours later the Senator came to me and said that he thought he would ride down to Rapid City with the President's aide and his physician, if that was agreeable to me. I saw him go, and started off on my daily walk. Shortly after one o'clock we were all back; the Congressman had arrived and we sat down to lunch. Immediately afterwards, the President retired to his room to take his afternoon nap and the other three of us sat in the living-room in comfortable, leather-covered rocking-chairs.

"Quite a surprise the President gave us this morning," remarked the Senator, and he looked over at me sharply. From his expression I realized that something unusual and unexpected had taken place. "Of course you know all about it," he went on. "I don't believe I do. What was it?" I asked. And then he told of the statement which the President had given to the press at noon, declaring that he did not choose to run for President in 1928. Relating this to a friend of his who has known him longer than I have, I saw a look of incredulity pass over his face and he intimated that it might be as well if this fact were not generally known; but I think I am rather proud of the fact that after nearly a quarter of a century of marriage, my husband feels free to make his decisions and act upon them without consulting me or giving me advance information concerning them.

I have made it my habit to refrain from making suggestions in regard to matters about which I know that he is better informed than I and in which he has had more experience. Perhaps I have something of the same feeling as the mother of a famous son who told me that she had never spoken a word of caution to him, lest she might thereby influence his judgment at a time when he needed a clear head and should be free to act according to his dictates.

SOVIET CURTAINS USE OF GOLD BY DENTISTS

Moscow (AP).—The Commissariat of Health has ruled that gold received by government dental parlors from the state gold fund is to be used only on the teeth of tollers favored by the social insurance law, preference being given to industrial workers.

Officers of all other categories can have a gold crown or filling made only on condition that they bring the metal with them. Rings, bracelets, chains, brooches and earrings are acceptable.

This system has been introduced to curtail the use of precious metal from the state's fund on anti-proletarian elements.

Paradise For Birds Built On Henry Ford Incentive

A view of the bird paradise at Aussig-on-Elbe, a Czechoslovakian steel center, established by Dr. Heinrich Lumpe (inset).

Aussig-on-Elbe, Czechoslovakia (AP).—Reading about Henry Ford's love for birds supplied the incentive for Dr. Heinrich Lumpe, hardware dealer and ornithologist, to establish a bird's paradise in this "Pittsburgh of Czechoslovakia."

He told this in explaining how he happened to hit on the idea of "Lumpe's Nature and Bird Protection Park" where feathered songsters nest unhindered, and food in winter if they wish to stay, and in payment keep the region free from caterpillars and other insect enemies of plant and tree.

Dr. Lumpe, whose contributions to ornithology won him an honorary degree from Vienna university, observed that with the extension of industry and the progressive thinning of forests, many species of birds were disappearing from this country. So in 1908 he took some of the profits of his hardware business and bought 12 acres, including a beautiful ravine, on a slope of the Marienberg, just outside of Aussig and its smoking mill stacks.

This tract has been laid out to illustrate famous fairy tales. There is an Enchanted Castle in the grounds, a grotto fitting the German "Itzenbach" saga and other similar places. Dr. Lumpe believes that by connecting fairy tales with bird life he has made the feathered folk more attractive to children. Perhaps too he has made the REQUEST DUTY FREE COFFEE FOR ENGLAND.

London (AP).—England is drinking even less coffee than usual, and the Coffee Trade Association is so worried about it that it has asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer to put coffee in line with tea by abolishing the import duty.

Normally, the Englishman consumes about 10,000 tons of coffee annually—or 10 ounces pounds of coffee as opposed to the 10½ pounds of the American. In 1928 this total was reduced by about 500 tons. No one has suggested a good reason why a country which already drank so little coffee should have used still less in 1929, unless it is that financial stringency has caused an increasing number of people to turn from coffee to the cheaper tea. Certainly no medical anti-coffee crusade has inspired the drop; for those British doctors who have made recent pronouncements on the topic have paid high tribute to the stimulating and invigorating action of coffee.

BY A FADING FIRE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THE flickering light of a fading fire
We all dream of an old desire,
Though we know not why, there is Something in it.

That fetches the old things back again,
And, gazing deep in the dying flames,
We think of faces, remember names,
No land is far in the firelight's glow,
And it isn't so long to the long ago.

There are nights we know that have Slipped away
Like a starlit sky at the dawn of day,
There are days we know that have Westward passed,
For not even the day itself could last.
We think our days and our nights are Done.

With the morning star and the evening sun,
But when we sit in the firelight here,
The past returns, and the loved ones Near.

There are things we know that we Thought forgot.
For the mind forgets—but the heart
Has not.
We shall often sit by the fire like
This,
And shall hear a voice, and shall feel
A kiss.

We leave old lands, and we lose old Friends,
And we have a joy and it seems it Ends.
But they all come back, when the new Things are,
By the flickering light of a fading
Fire.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

"VULGAR"

IN THE history of this word we find a story of class distinction as it has come down to us through the ages.
"Vulgar," to us, means not only coarse and ordinary, but it carries with it a sense of odium, being used today only to describe something really common and offensive.

Originally, however, the word described merely being "one of the people."
For "vulgar," is derived from the Latin "vulgus," meaning the common people, and in its native use by the ancients merely distinguished the common people from the aristocracy, the plebeian from the patrician. That the significance of the word should have degenerated to its present place is a commentary on the old attitude that the common people were coarse and boorish and only patricians knew refinement and good taste and the de-cencies and amenities of life.

Dear Editor:

TRAVELING through the South is eral Grant ate here in 1861." Wonder if he used the same roller towel?

Furniture stores have displays of cloves that look like phonographs. The only invention not yet invented is a dish towel that looks like a dish towel and that stays dry until the very last dish.

URGE PROTECTION OF GAME SUPPLY

Conference Points Out Danger to Wild Life.

New York.—Several hundred authorities on the kinds and ways of game-footed and winged game and attended subjects gathered at the recent meeting of the Sixteenth American Game conference here. The results of investigations and observations on the wild life of forests, fields and streams were presented to the conference.

Seth F. Gordon, former executive secretary of the Pennsylvania game commission, reported that there are 7,500,000 licensed hunters in the United States. These sportsmen, he stated, annually spend not less than $150,000,000 for firearms, ammunition, equipment, guides, transportation and other incidental items. Hunting increases cost gunners another $10,000, 000. Approximately 25,000,000 acres of land have been set aside for wild life refuges. Mr. Gordon stated.

The urgent need for the extension of protected game areas and public hunting grounds was made apparent when Aldo Leopold, who is directing a national game survey, pointed out that 100,000,000 acres of land in the central states have been shown in the required winter cover for quail plumage, prairie chickens, Hungarian partridges, rabbits and other game in the states referred to, as in others.
Intensive and modern farming practices have operated to the detriment of furred and feathered game.

"The posted land problem is now a serious factor in half of the states of the Union, and is becoming more difficult every year," an authority asserted. Data on the subject from 33 states was summarized. Twenty-one states reported that 33 1-3 per cent of all privately owned land within their boundaries is now posted against hunters, and the practice is growing at an alarming rate.

George D. Pratt, president of the American Forestry association, pointed to the fact that "there are three phases of outdoor life which are very closely related—forests, game and recreation. Without the forests many specimens of game could not exist, and unless the game animals are in the forests, thousands of people would feel no incentive to go there.
The hunter finds relief from the grind of every day living when he enters the woods to fish, but unless fish are in the streams he is unlikely to go. In other words, our forests lose much of their attractiveness and usefulness when they are without the presence of wild life."

Although the consensus of those participating in the American Game conference was that any community that wants game may have it, there was no inclination to sidestep the obvious fact that game authorities must have the qualified support of all sportsmen if conditions are to be improved or even maintained.

Stamp Adopted in 1844
Postmaster General John M. Niles recommended the use of stamps in this country in 1840, almost immediately after their adoption in England, but his suggestion was dishearteningly ignored. Not until four years later was there any authorization. Even then congress made no provision for printing them.—Gas Logie.

JUNIOR MUSIC CLUB STUDIES EARLY COMPOSERS.

The fifth group of the Kingston Junior Music Club held its meeting Thursday. The program consisted of compositions of Clementi, Beethoven, Chopin, Schumann, and Williams played by the members.

The subject of the study course,
"Early Pianoforte Composers," was given by Josephine Goffredi, Donald Davis and Harold Maccholdi. They told how the organ, clavichord and harpichord were forerunners of the piano, which was invented in 1711. The composers of that time were Bach, Haydn, Mozart and Clevement, whose first three sonatas marked the date (1770) when the harpichord was supplanted by the piano.

The playing of the Rhythmic Orchestra and singing of the Junior Club song concluded the meeting.
The club is composed of the piano pupils of Miss Jennie Hildebrandt.

Standing in Legion Contest

Following is the standing in the Ulster County American Legion Membership League, which is having an exciting contest to win the handsome membership cup which will be awarded to the Post in the county getting the largest increase in membership over the average for the past four years:

Pair-up Memberships.
	1925	1926	1927
Marlborough	44	24	34
Phoenicia	25	28	32
Saugerties	90	102	129
New Paltz	31	49	56
Kingston	350	550	528
Ellenville	31	53	45
Highland	0	21	18
	574	836	836

Ulster's quota as fixed by the state membership committee is 1,076.
Over 50 per cent already paid up.
The biggest development of the week is the jumping of Phoenicia, Post from last to second place by sending in 25 memberships all at once. Highland is the only Post now in the county that belongs to the "Lost Battalion." Unless this team soon gets some runs, they are going to be released to the bush league. The Highland boys will probably not want to rest at the bottom of the league much longer and perhaps will get busy now that Phoenicia has waked up.

As many memberships as possible will be gathered in by January 25 in order that Ulster will go to the Albany conference with a record membership.

Ulster county stood in eighteenth place in membership among all the counties of the state in the bulletin issued on January 15 from State Headquarters. They jumped from twenty-third place in 15 days.
Tom Murray, membership chairman of Kingston Post, expects the local Post to get out of fifth place before February 1st. Lots of local Legionnaires have promised to pay their dues and new ones to join up by that time.

George, a wee citizen of the North side, had committed a forbidden act and was being reprimanded by his father.
"George, I told you I'd spank you if you did that, didn't I?" asked his father.
"Yes," George replied, a little for-lornly.
"Well, what shall I do with you?"
asked his father, exasperated.
"How do you think I know?" came the reply. "I've never been a father."

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By the Associated Press.)

London—The fur coats, silk stockings, cosmetics and snappy remarks of stenographers who have come with the American delegation to the naval party are startling London. A girl reporter writes in the Evening Standard that English girls are less smart and well groomed but they still have their complexion; every American typist she saw was made up as though for the stage. Another journalist asked one of the girls if she hoped to find a husband in England. "I hear the Prince of Wales is out of town," she replied.

Mays Landing, N. J.—A 200-year old state law making it a high misdemeanor to take a girl of less than 18 away from the control and custody of her parents is inapplicable to a happy bride. Mr. and Mrs. William Hoffman of Atlantic City prosecuted John G. Hoffman, Jr., 21, farmer of Millford Neck, Md., who eloped with Rosetta Hoffman, 16. The maximum punishment possible was seven years in prison, a $2,000 fine and annulment of the marriage. "We're happy," said the bride, Judge Smathers dismissed the case.

BRAXOS RIVER OF TEXAS IS ASSIGNED HEAVY TASK.

Austin, Tex. (A.P.)—Texans contemplate spending $100,000,000 to make the mighty Braxos river work for them.

It is quite a task they have in mind for the river and its tributaries. They would irrigate thousands of acres of land, turn the wheels of many industries, develop electric power, supply drinking water and even use it for recreation. The Braxos river conservation and reclamation district created to direct the project will seek the financial aid of state and federal governments.

Long Skirts Not Fleeting Fad; Going Down Further In Spring

The descent of the skirt continues. Here is a foretaste of spring fashions—the dress length in the photograph for day street wear, and (above) the destined spring skirt lengths for various occasions. The—er—ah—hubs show the course of skirts since 1923.

By DEMING SEYMOUR (A.P. Feature Service Writer)

New York (A.P.)—Skirts are growing still longer.

They will be longer next spring than they were last fall.

Skirts are moving gradually down in spite of the stubborn rebellion the fashion world has known in many seasons—a rebellion waged by women who liked short skirts because they looked younger in them, and had more freedom of motion.

The forecast that skirts will keep on growing longer is not the guess of a designer, nor is it the interested prophecy of a merchant who has long skirts to sell.

It is the conclusion of Amos Parrish, "weather man," of style, whose agents watch what women are wearing in every representative sector of American life and who underwrites, by determining trends, to tell department store buyers and executives throughout the land, at twice-a-year clinics, what the mode of the moment will be six months hence.

Skirts weren't as long last fall as they were alleged to be, Mr. Parrish points out. They were just getting longer. They have been getting longer, slowly but certainly, since 1923.

Next spring, he says, the skirt most in fashion for daytime street wear will be of middle calf length, five to six inches above the ground, depending on the height of the wearer.

Most suits and ensembles for street wear and most daytime dresses and coats will be of the same middle calf length.

Three other lengths will be in fashion, if Mr. Parrish's censuses and charts are indicative of tendencies.

For active sports wear, dresses of "upper calf length," three to four inches below the knee, 15 to 16 inches above the ground. A few suits and ensembles for street wear and most evening wraps will also be of this length.

For formal afternoon wear, the longer calf length, 10 to 11 inches below the knee. Of this length also will be a few very formal suits, and ensembles for street wear and most of the formal afternoon dresses.

For evening wear, dresses of ankle length at one or more places. A few evening wraps will be ankle length and a few will be hip length.

Many women believe that skirts were arbitrarily dropped last fall from the knee to the ankle, but the tendency to longer dresses goes back two years. By April, 1929, most dresses were "upper calf length."

By spring fashion analyses show, dresses most in fashion will be about two inches longer than last October.

Six different skirt lengths have been in fashion in the last seven years. Four-fifths of the dresses were of ankle length in 1923. Five years later skirts were about as short as women could wear them at the knee or higher.

Then they began to get longer, and Mr. Parrish avers that women themselves brought about the change. They were tired of the plain straight line effects, and began to add bows and pleats and other details. And circular gowns, flat hips and flounce effects didn't balance with short dresses.

DIXIE UNITES IN ATTACK ON SALT MARSH MOSQUITO.

Richmond, Va. (A.P.)—The greedy salt marsh mosquito, big brother of the malaria insect, has hit off a big hunk of trouble.

He carries no disease, but his size and numbers make him such a pest that a new organization, the Gulf and South Atlantic Anti-mosquito Congress, will attack him in a correlated campaign all along the South Atlantic and Gulf coasts.

Around World In 10 Days Is His Goal With A Plane

Harry A. Husted, Cleveland manufacturer (left), who, in a Fokker F-32 plane, hopes to encircle the world in 10 days. James Dole (right), Western Air Express flier, will be chief pilot. Map shows tentative route.

Cleveland (A.P.)—A modern Jules Verne steps forward to encircle the world in 10 days by airplane.

The Jules Verne of another day pictured man girdling the world in 45 days; Meers and Collier completed their globe tour in less than 24 days; Harry A. Husted, Cleveland manufacturer, hopes to make world-touring a reality.

Husted, arranging changes in the Fokker F-32 he has ordered for the trip, plans to leave the west coast June 15, off the beaten track over totally projected routes.

The flight over the Pacific may be non-stop, with a refueling over the Hawaiian Islands and first stop in China. He then will fly northward through Siberia, heading for Moscow, Paris, England, New York and the west.

Newer developments in multi-motored airplanes, in the manufacture of fuel and oil, and in refueling, he said, "will make ocean hops in heavier-than-air craft regular ventures in the future."

James Dole of Western Air Express will be chief pilot. There will be plenty for the crew of four to do besides operating the ship. Husted will have maps to check and layout of strange countries. In the nose of the fuselage will be still and motion picture cameras, half-tone and colored, and over every inch of the way he hopes to keep them clicking.

These will be the first pictures of a world-girdling flight and, because of their educational value, several hundred thousand feet of them will be given to the bureau of education in Washington.

There will also be "household duties." Husted will be the cook. He can cook everything, he said, except pies.

Catwalks around each of the four Pratt and Whitney Wasp will permit overhauling of motors in flight. The engines will be mounted in two tandem.

The fuel and oil will be of special type and the plane, which will weigh 12,570 pounds, will be able to carry 15,500 pounds of fuel. Between 60 and 85 gallons an hour is the anticipated gasolene consumption.

Church And School Notes
(By The Associated Press.)
Albany, N. Y., Jan. 18.—Sorority women at Syracuse University are better students than their brothers who live in fraternity row, according to the scholarship ratings of 32 fraternities and 23 sororities for the school year 1928-29.

Psi Upsilon succeeded in displacing Alpha in first place for the first time in several years, with an average rating of 1.301, but the averages of the sororities show that Alpha Epsilon Phi, highest ranking women's organization, had a standing of 1.663.

Thirteen fraternities fell below 1.042, which was the lowest sorority average for the school year. Phi Upsilon rose from ninth to first place, while Alpha dropped from first to eighteenth. Gamma Eta Gamma retained its rank of second place.

The men also showed a better average than last year in Delta Upsilon, which rose from twenty-second to fourth place.

Colgate University alumni have started a nation-wide drive to raise money for a faculty endowment fund, the proceeds of which would be devoted exclusively to increasing the salaries of faculty members who have served five years or more.

Lack of ability to concentrate, according to Dr. William E. Weld, dean of the men's college of the University of Rochester, is the principal reason for scholastic failure of students.

The five most prevalent reasons for failure, according to a survey made by the dean, are lack of brains; lack of interest in the work; lack of time because of outside employment; inability to concentrate; poor health, and faulty disposal of the time at the student's disposal.

"Most students in college have the mental capacity to do the work if they can concentrate upon it," said the dean. "Campus life nowadays is making so many demands on a man's time that it requires effort to prepare adequately for each course."

Sociology classes of Hobart and William Smith colleges have been assigned by Dean Bartlett the task of taking an old age census in Geneva. The assignment was given at the request of the state commission on old age security.

The object of the survey is to determine the needs of old people and the information gathered is expected to be of great assistance in formulating legislation for pensioning or otherwise aiding the indigent aged of the state. About 450 questionnaires are expected to be turned in after the census is completed.

Market For Fruits And Vegetables

New York, Jan. 18. (State Department of Agriculture and Markets)—Florida strawberries were in moderate receipt on the local wholesale market today. Offerings varied greatly in condition and quality, and sales ranged accordingly. The undertone of the market as a whole was weaker. The very best berries in quart baskets jobbed out at 35c-38c, occasionally as high as 40c, while some very inferior sold down to five cents.

A year ago Florida strawberries had hardly begun to appear in city markets, but shipments last week increased to 90 cars and the season's total to date is 50 cars.

Although prices changed on western iceberg type lettuce were small and unimportant, buying was generally slow in a rather dull market. Criter of four and five dozen heads from Arizona peddled out from $4.25-$5, while California shipments commanded $5-$6.50. Occasionally $5.

Further expansion of the lettuce industry in the west is seen in the preliminary estimate of 19,000 acres in Arizona for harvesting after March 1. This is materially above the record of any previous spring crop in that state.

Notwithstanding the limited offerings of Lima beans, the market ruled inactive this morning as the demand was limited.

Imported stock from Cuba whole sale at $5-$9 per bushel hamper. Florida shipments realized from $7-$9.

FIRE ENDANGERS RISK IN HOME FOR THE AGED

Chicago, Jan. 18 (AP).—Priests from St. Mary's Mission House joined with firemen from nearby suburbs in the 16 below zero temperature early today to conquer a fire endangering St. Ann's Home for Old People near Techy.

The flames attacked chicken houses and straw stacks behind the home which houses 300 old people. The united efforts of the 40 priests and the firemen brought the blaze under control before it could reach the building.

St. Mary's Mission House is across the road from the Old People's Home.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—The reaction in stock prices, which started yesterday, continued today when scores of leading issues were marked down 1 to 5 points before sufficient buying power developed to bring about an irregular recovery. In contrast to cautious earlier in the year, trading showed a tendency to turn dull on the rallies and to increase on the declines.

Application for a receiver for the Fox Film Corporation, brought by a minority stockholders committee, was followed by an outburst of selling in that stock, which carried it down 4½ points to 18, but it quickly rallied above 20. The stock sold as low as 16½ this year.

Further weakness also developed in the radio shares, Grigsby-Grunow falling 3½ points to a new low at 12½, which contrasts with a high of 70 established by the present stock after the split-up last year. Kolster Radio declined fractionally to a new low at 2. Radio Corporation Common sold down to 35½ but rebounded above 37.

U. S. Steel Common sold down more than a point to 16½, or more than 6 points below Thursday's high, but rallied moderately on the announcement of a further upturn in steel operations in the Youngstown district. J. I. Case sold down 5 points. Columbia Carbon 4, and Johns-Manville, American and Foreign Power, American Water Works, General Electric, Air Reduction, and U. S. Industrial Alcohol recorded extreme losses of 3 points or more, but most of these issues made substantial recoveries from the low prices in the rally which took place during the last hour of trading. A high demand for the tobacco issues featured the late trading. American Tobacco quickly recovered its early loss of 3½ points and the B stock converted a decline of 1½ into a gain of 1 point. Lorillard moved up 2½, and the Liggett and Myers issues and Reynolds Tobacco advanced a point or so.

The closing was steady. Sales approximated 1,300,000 shares.

MAYOR, CHIEF OF POLICE AND 18 OTHERS CONVICTED

Hammond, Ind., Jan. 18 (AP).—Mayor Raleigh P. Hale, Chief of Police James W. Regan and 13 others of East Chicago including one woman, were convicted in federal district court last night on charges of conspiracy to violate the prohibition law.

The convictions represented another chapter in the government's extensive campaign to clean out what it charged were widespread wholesale violations of liquor laws in the Calumet district which includes the Indiana cities of Gary, East Chicago, Hammond, Whiting and Crown Point. Gambling and vice under the protection of officials resulted from the liquor law violations, the government charged.

The trial that ended last night was the third growing out of the northern Indiana investigation.

DO YOU KNOW—

Modern girls will never die of broken hearts, according to an eminent doctor.

Three hundred and eighty-two applications for patents were filed by English women last year.

A woman, aged eighty-six, has decided to adopt modern fashions, and wears knee-length frocks.

The reason it is held unlucky to spill salt is that salt is the symbol of hospitality and friendship.

HOLY CITY'S HISTORY

In earliest recorded history, about 3500 B. C., Palestine, including Jerusalem, was an Egyptian province, later passing under control of the Canaanites.

Jerusalem was captured by David, King of Israel, from the Jebusite clan of Canaanites 1033 B. C.

Conquered by Nebuchadnezzar, Babylonian king, who carried the Jews into captivity, 593 B. C.

Cyrus, king of Persia captured the city about 530 B. C., permitting the Jews to return.

Placed under control of the Greek Ptolemies by Alexander the Great about 332 B. C.

Reconquered by the Jews, led by the Maccabees, about 200 B. C.

Destroyed by the Romans under Emperor Titus, 70 A. D.

Control wrested from Christians under Rome by the Mohammedans, 637 A. D.

Crusaders led by Peter the Hermit captured the city, 1099.

Reconquered by Mohammedans, becoming part of Turkish empire 1517.

British troops entered the city in 1917. In 1922 the League of Nations gave Great Britain a mandate over Palestine.—Capper's Weekly.

TRADE JOURNAL HUMOR

"Hit and run" items from shoe and leather reporter:

If fashion does not let up the skirts will have to be let down.

Wall Street was a barometer until it was knocked off the wall.

Nothing succeeds like the success of a widow who is looking for a second husband.

The more we learn about Wall Street the more charitable we feel towards prize fights.

Grammar is well enough in its way, but it would be fatal to the success of any football coach.

French Salt Derived From Lakes Far Inland

Salt is so common and so inexpensive that one is apt to lose sight of its value and necessity. In certain parts of the orient salt is so scarce and so valued it is used as a medium of exchange. France has no salt mines; and, so far as the smooth table variety is concerned, it is entirely dependent upon imports. You see a famous brand of English packet salt in all parts of the country. But it's an expensive business getting it to every small town, and that is where the Etang de Berre comes in handy. It is on the road to Marseilles—you pass it away to your right—and it is the largest of all the Etangs. They are great lakes of sea water, fed often underground, by the sea; and they are dotted along the Mediterranean coast from Marseilles to Spain. You find them again in the Landes, that flat, marshy stretch in the neighborhood of Bordeaux. Shallow evaporation pans, leading away from the Etang de Berre, and looking in the distance exactly like vast reservoirs, have been built, and these are filled from the lake. They are then drained off, and dry air and blazing sun do the rest.

All History Recorded in Scheme of Nature

Nature will be reported. All things are engaged in writing their history. The planet, the pebble, goes attended by its shadow. The rolling rock leaves its scratches on the mountain; the river, its channel in the soil; the animal, its bones in the stratum; the fern and leaf, their modest epitaph in the coal. The falling drop makes its scripture in the sand or the stone. Not a foot steps into the snow or along the ground, but prints in characters more or less lasting, a map of its march. Every act of the man inscribes itself in the memories of his fellows, and in his own manners and face. The air is full of sounds, the sky of tokens, the ground is all memoranda and signposts, and every object covered over with hints, which speak to the intelligent.—Emerson.

Walt Whitman

Whitman was a great liberator, a great humanitarian, a great American, a great poet; was he, therefore, a great poet also? Intellectually indolent, emotionally unwhipped, spiritually chaotic and formless, Walt Whitman is the great American now safely and securely enshrined and embalmed in the hearts of his countrymen not because of his poetry, but because of his patriotism.

There is wonderful poetic fire in Whitman as there is in the life and work of every great liberator. But Whitman was not another Shakespeare nor another Milton nor another Shelley. If he is not of this immortal company, is he truly a great poet? Though no one need deny that he was a superb human being writing astonishingly human poems. Poignant prose poetry.—From "Our Changing Human Nature," by Samuel D. Schmalhausen.

Sea Eel a Menace

There is a species of sea eel which darts like lightning at a human victim and sinks its sharp teeth into an arm or ankle. A man would be helpless against one of these creatures were it not for a trick familiar to the South sea natives. In its lightning-like dive the eel gets any grip it can and holds on. Then it waits for the victim to weaken, when it will relax its grip and try to get a more advantageous one. All the attacked person has to do is to endure the pain until the fish opens its mouth. Then, if the man moves quickly enough, it is possible to escape to the surface by pushing the creature away.

Pulling Power of Horses

Large horses are better than small ones for pulling heavy loads, tests at the Illinois agricultural experiment station have disclosed, although many horse owners have insisted that a "good little team" will outpull a big one, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Trials were made with 144 different teams, and accurate measurements of their performance taken with a dynamometer. It was also found that a good disposition was an important factor in the animals' success as pullers, and skillful driving was shown to be as necessary as good horses.

How Huddle Originated

The football expert who invented the huddle probably got the idea from observing four feminine heads grouped over a bridge table.—Arkansas Gazette.

THE JOINERS

News of Interest to Members of Fraternal Societies.

Monday evening the entered apprentice degree will be conferred by Randon Lodge, No. 343, F. & A. M.

The members of Vanderlin Council, No. 41, D. of A., will hold a card party in their rooms, 14 Henry street, on Tuesday evening, January 28.

Friday evening a very interesting program given by the young daughters of members of Klaxon Chapter, No. 15, O. E. S., marked the regular communication of the chapter held that evening in the chapter rooms in the Masonic building, Broadway and Strand. The little girls gave a very charming drill and at the close little June Hudler presented her mother, Mrs. Marion Hudler, with a basket of flowers.

A violin and cornet duet was rendered by two young boys, Salzman and Slikovitch, and a piano solo by Miss Kline. Following the program the officers of the chapter gave the degree "Memories" and at the close presented Mrs. Hudler with a token of the esteem in which they held her. The worthy matron was also presented with a number of other gifts by her friends. During the evening Mrs. Alida Draffen Van Deusen was installed as Adah. At the close of the chapter meeting refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed. At the next meeting of the chapter a domino social will be held.

There was a large attendance at the meeting of Vanderlin Council, No. 41, D. of A., on Tuesday evening, the occasion being the installation of the newly elected officers and the annual Christmas party. As the deputy, Mrs. Mary McCullik, of Ravenna, was sick and not able to be present, the associate state councillor, Ella M. Snow, who is also a senior past councillor of Vanderlin, acted as installing officer and the following officers were installed for the coming term: Junior past councillor, Mary Fields; associate junior past councillor, Laura Van Nostrand; councillor, Mildred Burgher; associate councillor, Jane McKittick; vice councillor, Anna Van Valkenburg; associate vice councillor, Lulu Short; recording secretary, Margaret J. O'rorbaugh; assistant recording secretary, Ella M. Snow; financial secretary, Melvina S. Lape; assistant financial secretary, Elizabeth Brooks; treasurer, Charlotte B. Deyo; conductor, Carrie B. Kier; warden, Trissa Swibold; inside sentinel, Elizabeth Shander; outside sentinel, Mary Emma Nichols; trustees for 18 months, Elizabeth Walsh. After the meeting each member received a gift from the Christmas tree and Sister Ten Broeck and her able committee served refreshments and a pleasant social time was enjoyed by all.

News from the World on Wheels

Selected after a rigid competitive test, ten Viking Eight sedans have been purchased by the Sutherland Stage and Transportation Company for de luxe taxicab use in San Diego, Cal. Before selecting the Vikings, officials of the transportation company devoted a month to testing cars of various makes. These cars were operated under every condition they will encounter during their service with the company and accurate records of performance were kept. These records included gasoline and oil consumption, ease of handling in traffic, riding comfort and dependability under all driving conditions.

What is happening under the hood when an engine drives a motor car 52,710 miles without a stop? A world's endurance record set by a Chrysler "65" stock sedan on the Avus Speedway near Berlin recently, represented 65 days, two hours and three minutes of continuous engine operation, during which time the car traveled a distance of more than two times around the world. No other car has covered a distance near this mark under similar operating conditions. In this long, grueling almost ten weeks, each piston traveled 22,748 miles up and down inside the cylinder, operating in a "roadway" only 4 1/2 inches long. The crankshaft turned over 568,567,744 times, and there were 103,322 explosions on the pistons of the engine. Each wheel of the car made 35,472,204 revolutions.

Blaine Won; Molvin Lost

Johnny Blaine, local bantam-weight, who has the championship of the National Guard in view, took another step forward Friday night at the Newburgh armory by handily defeating Ray Halverson of the Hilly City in the semi-final eight round bout.

According to fans who saw the scrap, Blaine won by a wide margin. Many of Johnny's friends went to Newburgh to see him fight. He made a good impression on the Hilly City fans, who gave him a big hand.

After resting for several days, Blaine will leave for Sullivan's gym in New York, where he will train for several "hard shots" that he expects to fight in the armories of the metropolis. His manager, Gus Marano of this city, intends to boost Johnny until he becomes bantam-weight champion of the New York National Guard.

Charlie Molvin, who met Frankie Minerva in New York, in a six rounder lost the decision.

LARGE CAGERS ON WOLVERINE COURT

Only Four Players Are Less Than Six Feet Tall.

Michigan's basketball team again this season gives observers an opportunity to dub the Wolverines "giants." Of the 14 men Coach Venker has retained on his varsity squad only four are less than six feet tall. Six men stand above the six foot mark, while four are an even six feet tall.

If Coach Venker should pick Norm Daniels, sophomore forward, it is probable that every man on the team will hit the six-foot mark. Capt. Bob Chapman, who jumps center, is the second tallest man on the squad, being 6 feet 2 inches. Truskowski and Orwig, forwards, as well as Daniels, are an even six feet tall as is Lovell, guard. Jones, sophomore guard prospect, is an inch taller than his rival, Lovell.

Henry Weiss, sophomore forward from Cleveland, is the midjet of the squad. He is 5 feet 7, the same as was Danny Rose, star floor guard of last winter. Weiss, however, stands a true chance of breaking the monopoly of the six-footers.

The three men besides Weiss who are less than six feet tall are Kanitz and Downing, forwards, and Hudson, guard. They all stand 5 feet 10.

Torrell, sub center, is the tallest man, 6 feet 2 1/2 inches. Dougan, another center, and Jennett, guard, are an inch shorter. Ricketts, another guard, is 6 feet 1.

An indication of what the recently authorized additional playing strength teams is seen in the acquisition by Montreal Maroons of Bill Phillips, flashy center of the Vancouver professionals, who was sold by the Const. club to Windsor, Ontario, for $10,000, and resold for the same figure to the local team.

Maroons will now send into action three complete forward lines, all with real merit. They will consist of Stewart, Siebert and Hooley Smith as regulars; Phillips, Trotter and Ward as seconds and Phillips, Northcott and Robinson as thirds.

Eddie Wittmer, star halfback at Princeton, is captain of the basketball team. Vogt, Carey and Bennett are other football regulars to make the court team.

Representative Ham Fish, who is racking his brain to find a way to bring the Army and Navy together in football again, always put a lot of effort into that he did at Harvard. He was a wizard receiver of a forward pass, even going to the extreme of catching them sitting when need be. His unusual height gave him a valuable reach aloft and he could pick the low ones off the ground. In the law school he put in his spare time organizing teams of former Harvard and Yale players for games.

Jane Bell of Toronto, a member of the Canadian women's Olympic track team in 1928 and winner of many national and international honors, has decided to give up running. The announcement of her retirement came through Myrtle Cook, another Olympic star. Miss Cook, who is forming a team to compete in the Millrose games in New York, said Miss Bell had refused to join the team because she was retiring from the track.

The French Tennis Ranking committee issued a new list for the 1929 campaign, with Henri Cochet and Rene Lacoste grouped together in first place. Jean Borotra was third and Christian Bousquet and Jacques Brugnon were tied for fourth.

In the women's ranking, Mme. Mathieu was first, followed by Mme. Lefaurie, Mme. Bordes and Mme. Lafanade in that order. Mesdemoiselles Barbier, Neufend and Metaxa were together in fifth place.

Foreign boxers—Including Americans—must pass the joint scrutiny of Linhar Minister Margaret Bondfield and the British boxing board of control before getting work in Great Britain. Miss Bondfield revealed as much in the house of commons when she said she always consulted the board before permitting foreign boxers to enter the country.

The move was designed, she said, to "prevent the entry of boxers of an unrepentant who will only undertake minor engagements which could equally well be filled by British boxers."

Yale's basketball coach, Elmer Ripley, was generally conceded to be the most consistent four shooter in the professional ranks a few years back.

Maurice Kent of Northwestern tells this one about "Doc" Spears, the Minnesota coach. It occurred during Spears' first year at West Virginia. Spears' eleven got off to a good start in one of its biggest games when it returned the kickoff 25 yards. On the first play, however, something untoward happened and the referee penalized the West Virginians 15 yards. Another penalty of half the distance to the goal was soon inflicted and a third followed, putting the ball on West Virginia's one-foot line.

This was too much for Spears. He hurried out and without hesitation acquainted the referee with his opinion of him. "Get off the field or I'll penalize your team again!" barked the official.

"Where to, brother, where to?" came back Spears.

Sport Slants

By Alan J. Gould

(Associated Press Sports Editor.)

Whether it's home runs, tee shots or the stomach-ache, Babe Ruth can always be counted upon to produce something extraordinary and in a big way.

The Babe wants $85,000 a year for three years and shows some inclination to insist upon it with appropriate bluster. He is willing to pay his star a presidential stipend of $75,000 for a two-year term of office.

In either case the Babe gets a raise for when bigger and better salaries are paid in the major leagues. He will get them. Whatever the merits of the present financial dispute, Ruth always has been worth whatever the Yankees paid him. In less than a decade, the Ruthian pay-check mounted from $10,000 to $70,000 a mere 700 per cent increase, but the Yankees have paid bigger and better dividends regularly.

His last three-year contract, calling for a total of $210,000, was considered a wild risk—for the Yankees. It was signed on or about the eleventh floor of the Ruppert brewery and there was some disposition among the boys to believe that "Colonel Jake" had become a trifle barmy under the influence of his surroundings.

At the close of that year—1927—the same boys crowded around to congratulate the colonel on his remarkably astute judgment after the Babe had proceeded to clout 60 home runs and smash his own major league record.

About this time eight years ago, Ruth apparently had hit the chutes after a disastrous season and a lot of riotous business among the bright and dim lights along Broadway. The big fellow sat at a dinner table one night and listened to the famous appeal of Jimmy Walker to get hold of himself, turn over a new leaf and make good for the "dirty-faced kids" who considered him an idol.

"I'm going to quit this stuff and get down to business and that goes," responded Ruth, with a sincere show of emotion. He did. And except for the famous stomach-ache of 1935 and the "flu" of 1929, the Babe has missed few games.

A year ago the Babe said to me: "Say, I feel more like a kid than ever. I'm not getting any younger but I will be only 35 next month and I've got a lot of baseball left. I still think I will be in there when I am 40, taking a cut at 'em."

Ruth will be "only 36" this February, an age when, according to Big Bill Tilden, no champion should be slowing up unless he has yielded to "mental pressure" or lost the "will to win."

Ruth never has been troubled by mental pressure. His under-planning no longer carries him over the territory in right field as rapidly as before, but his spirit, the "will to win" or whatever other fancy name you give to the "competitive urge" is still there. Ruth would rather forfeit any raise in pay than miss the opening game but he will not be called upon to make this insignificant sacrifice.

The answer to what ex-Bunion Derby competitors do in the winter-time has been obtained after considerable research.

Olli Wastinen of New York, the 97-pound Finnish runner and Phil Granville, the Canadian walker, each of whom figured in the cross-country Tyle Derby to be run shortly from Quebec to Montreal.

Wastinen, the nearest thing to a singer midget that has come out of Finland, was a snow-shoe champion before he came to America to take up distance running. He covered 2,000 miles in the first Bunion Derby. He paired later with Jote Ilay to beat a team of horses in a six-day race at Philadelphia. Olli and Jote covered 735 miles, running alternately, and had the quadrupeds dizzy.

CANZONERI LOSES TO JACK (KID) BERG

Tony Canzoneri, former feather-weight champion of the world, who has a farm at Marlborough, lost to Jack (Kid) Berg of England in a 10-round bout at Madison Square Garden, New York City, Friday night.

The Briton's victory came as a distinct shock to Canzoneri, generally considered one of the very few great fighters of the era, who was a 2 to 1 favorite. Berg's victory demonstrates at the same time that the Englishman can make the lightweight limit without sapping any of his remarkable endurance or speed. The Englishman scaled 134 1/2 to Canzoneri's 133.

Although most ringside critics believed Berg was easily the referee, Mike Hyland, who was the third man in the ring at Bill Singer's Kingston Fair Grounds show the night that Manuel Quintana was given a technical knockout over Freddie Kelly, voted for Canzoneri. Both judges, however, agreed on Berg.

Hoboken Team Trims Highland

Holding Highland Hose Company's basketball representatives to four field goals, all of which were scored by Jimmy Merritt of this city, and scoring 10 themselves, the Hoboken Germans trimmed the firemen, 32-26, Friday night at Smith Hall, Highland.

The game was a close one especially in the first half, which ended 13-12 in Highland's favor. During the second-half the Germans kept a very close check on the Highland shooters, while Johnson, Hoboken's left forward, got loose to score 11 points for his team. His tally went a long way to help the Germans overcome the firemen.

Jimmy Merritt, Highland's only field scorer, was highest individual point collector of the game. He gleaned 14 markers for this evening's work. Four fields and six fouls gave him his total.
